Hannah Burrows advises clients on brand protection and assists with a variety of trade mark and design matters.

Hannah joined Reddie & Grose in September 2016. She previously graduated with an LLB Law degree from the University of Manchester.

Hannah was first introduced to Intellectual Property law when studying a module as part of her degree. In addition to this, she gained experience in the world of trade marks working as a paralegal for IP specialist firms in London, and has dealt with a variety of trade mark matters. These include assisting clients with trade mark maintenance as well as dealing with trade mark infringement matters and obtaining registered design protection.

Hannah is on the CITMA Diversity & Inclusion committee.

Hannah has a keen interest in fashion, acting, dancing and music.
